A love of art has set Sara Moore from country New South Wales on a career path to become a graphic designer through Raffles College outstanding Bachelor of Design Degrees.

The young aspiring graphic design student from Narromine in the state's west, opted to study at Raffles College of Design and Commerce in North Sydney. "I thoroughly researched my choices and decided that Raffles was where I wanted to be," she said.

"I liked Raffles reputation, its convenient location and its exceptional course outlines. I considered the courses to be well balanced. Fee-help is a big plus also," she said.

"I love designing and I know the College can give me the knowledge and skills needed to be a first class graphic designer. If you have a conceptual ability and a passion for design, Raffles is really the place to be. Small class sizes are appealing and generally they give better results.

It's a great course over three years full time study. You're allowed to be creative. I like this freedom in graphic design as it definitely works for me. I love coming up with an idea, representing it, and convincing everyone else that it's the right one. It's definitely a place for creative people. We're all design students mixing with each other from across all the design majors. We bounce ideas off each other. It's a great experience" she said.

Sara said "Campus life is great. Meeting new people is fantastic and there are great opportunities available. There's a fantastic atmosphere here because everyone is very friendly. Although we work hard, it's casual and 'laid back'. This very pleasant Raffle's atmosphere is essential for creativity to flourish as you can't be creative if you're stressed!"

The first year graphic design student said the move from the country to the city wasn't at all daunting. "I love being in Sydney. I like the interesting people and places and there's more to do, more freedom, it's not as restricted as living in the country. Everyone is very accommodating and I've found it to be an easy adjustment. There is nothing hard about it, and it's so much fun living here. I'm staying in student accommodation not far away from the College and have my own room. It's great," she said.

"After graduating, I'm planning to get a part-time graphic design job hopefully in advertising, maybe further my studies, and do a little travelling also," Sara said.
